

The UK government's stance on EU financial reform
A 'London-Brussels Nexus' series Bruegel event

with

Mark Hoban, MP,
Financial Secretary to the British Treasury

chaired by

Nicolas Véron
Senior Fellow, Bruegel

Monday 14 March, 17:30, Bruegel, Brussels

On 2 June last year, shortly after the UK general election, Mark Hoban, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, came to Bruegel to explain the new government's stance on financial services reform. Since then, the Conservative-Liberal-Democrat coalition government has introduced a number of initiatives, including the overhaul of UK prudential supervision with a shift of responsibilities to the Bank of England, and the establishment of an Independent Commission on Banking that is expected to deliver its final report later this year. The financial legislative agenda has also moved on at EU level, with major drafts expected in the next few months including on markets regulation (MiFID revision), capital and liquidity requirements for banks (CRD4), and crisis management and resolution frameworks.

We would like to invite you to listen to Mark Hoban, the UK Financial Secretary to the Treasury, as he comes back to Bruegel to debate the UK government's approach to this agenda.

The session will include a Q&A discussion moderated by Nicolas Véron, Senior Fellow at Bruegel.

This event is part of a Bruegel series devoted to "the London-Brussels Nexus" that will also include breakfast discussions on the relationship between the City of London and the EU, the first two of which are scheduled on 22 March and 27 April respectively.

RSVP: matilda.sevon@bruegel.org

Bruegel 33, rue de la Charité,
B-1210 Brussels

About the speaker

Mark Hoban MP was appointed Financial Secretary to the Treasury in May 2010. He was appointed the Shadow Financial Secretary to the Treasury in December 2005. Between November 2003 and December 2005 he was Shadow Minister for Schools. Prior to November 2003, he was an Opposition Whip. Between 2001 and 2003 Mark was a member of the Select Committee on Science and Technology.