The discussion on a coordinated exit strategy from fiscal, monetary and financial sector support is in full swing. Clearly, economic policies need to move from crisis mode to a more sustainable mode while minimising macro-economic risks in the form of a double-dip recession or the build-up of yet another bubble. But how exactly should the various dimensions of the exit be coordinated, at what speed should policies move towards the exit and, last but not least, in which sequence?

Wolfgang Münchau is an associate editor of the Financial Times where he writes a weekly European column. He is also co-founder of Eurointelligence ASBL. Previously, he was editor-in-chief of the Financial Times Deutschland.

Lucio Pench heads the unit “Fiscal policy in the euro area and the EU” at DG ECFIN. Previous assignments include coordinating the surveillance of the EU member states and advisor at the Group of Policy Advisers reporting to the Commission President.

Jean Pisani-Ferry is the director of Bruegel.

Jakob von Weizsäcker is a research fellow at Bruegel. Previously, he worked at the World Bank and headed the office of a junior minister at the Federal Economics Ministry in Berlin.
